The symbolic-Interactionist Theory:

Cooley and Mead:

Cooley showed that our self-images are largely a reflection of what we see in other people`s eyes (the looking-glass self) The image of ourselves we form by observing how other people react to us.

Mead identified two stages in the development of self: The play stage, in which children learn to take the role of the other, and The game stage, in which children learn to participate in reciprocal relationships through games.

Life Cycle Theories of Socialization:

As an individual`s life situation changes, his or her role changes, The changes, say, from wife to mother to working woman, create a need in each instance for socialization in new roles to take place, people must learn different socially appropriate behaviors for each new situation.
