Descriptive and Process Paragraphs

In this lecture, you will learn about ...

- descriptive paragraphs and reasons for writing them.
- organizing and writing descriptive paragraphs using adjectives and prepositions,
- process paragraphs and reasons for writing them.
- using transition words to write a process paragraph.

1- Descriptive paragraphs

A descriptive paragraph explains how someone or something looks or feels. In this type, we use adjectives. They are words that tell us how things look, feel, taste, sound, or smell. Adjectives also describe how you feel about something. Here are a few common adjectives. See the adjective list on page 25.

- To write a good descriptive paragraph, you can answer these questions:

Description of a PLACE may answer some of these questions:

- Where is the place?
- How big is it?
- How warm or cold is the place?
- How (does) the place make you feel? Why?
- What things can you see in this place?
- What colors do you see?

Niagara Falls, a popular destination for thousands of visitors each year, is a beautiful place. When you stand at the edge and look down at the 188 feet of white waterfalls, you feel amazed at the power of nature. The tree-lined river that leads into the falls is fast-moving, pouring over the edge of the falls and crashing to the bottom in a loud roar. If you want to experience the falls close up, go for a boat ride. You'll come near enough to look up at the roaring streams of water flowing over the edge and feel the cool mist that rises as the water hits the rocks below. Seeing Niagara Falls is an unforgettable experience!

- Using prepositions in describing the place around you

Prepositions tell us how a space is organized. These are some common and useful prepositions:

in front of / behind	to the right of / To the left of
on top of / on the bottom of	in the middle of next to	around
above	between
below, underneath

- Describing Characters (Persons)

Here are some common adjectives for describing people:

Personality

happy,
satisfied
relaxed
exciting nervous
angry
serious
sad, depressed
outgoing

Physical characteristics

big, large, tall
small, tiny, short thin
heavy strong

light-, dark-skinned

- A description of a person may answer some of the following questions:
 - Who is the person?
 - What does the person do?
 - What does he or she look like?
 - How does the person act—what is his or her personality .like?
 - How does he or she make others feel?

2- Process paragraphs

A process paragraph explains how something is done. A process paragraph is a detailed description of a process or procedure. It is often used in technical writing, recipes, and instructional manuals. The purpose of a process paragraph is to provide clear and concise instructions that can be followed to complete a task. The process paragraph should be written in a logical order, starting with the beginning of the process and ending with the final result. The process paragraph should also include any necessary details, such as the materials and tools needed, and the steps to be followed. The process paragraph should be written in a clear and concise style, using simple and direct language. The process paragraph should be easy to read and understand, and it should provide all the information needed to complete the task.

• Transitions

Transitions are words that connect the steps in a paragraph. Transition words and phrases show the relationships between the ideas in a paragraph. They are not used between every sentence, but are used often enough to make the order clear.

Here are some common transition words and phrases that, show Limbo order or the order of steps:

after, after that, while, next, the next step,

next, the last step, the first step, at first

then, before, meanwhile,
